They have fans on all continents and appear on American TV more often than any K-pop group has ever had in history, even though they are famous around the world, but the aspects of BTS that make them different from other popular artists around the world are that they don't sing in English often. In fact, except for english words or lines in their songs (and the one made with Steve Aoki), most of their discs are in Korean. Of course, a lot of people are wondering: Can a member of BTS speak English? If so, who? Read below for answers to Jin, Jung-kook, RM and Jimin's Boyband BTS | Rm is a leader and one of the oldest members of BTS, he is the only person in the fluent English speaking group. He revealed that most of his English skills were self-taught and he learned a lot from watching friends. When he was 12, he also studied in New Zealand for four months. What may help RM gain fluency is his impressive brain. He had an IQ of 148 and when he was in an episode of Korean TV show Running Man back in 2015, it was revealed after testing that RM had a real talent for language. However, although he appears to be working well in English today, RM shares that earlier in BTS's career, he was not convinced of speaking English to anyone else. I had a brief interview, I think, from Reuters from France. I practiced remembering three sentences for two hours. But I think this type of interview has made me very develop and helped me. Other BTS members can speak English at different levels, most Korean students study English for about ten years, and K-pop companies also teach their English proficiency as well, so all other BTS members can speak and understand English to a certain extent, even if they are not considered fluent like RM. During a recent live stream, the youngest member, Jungkook, shared that his goal was finally to participate in more English interviews. I'm studying hard. I'm remembering all the words because RM speaks very good English, so he's doing a tough job. [Of answering questions and translations] For us but in the future – I would say one year – if I continue this stream of education, I may be able to help RM by speaking English as well. Other languages that BTS members can speak in addition to English, the other two languages that BTS members have at least dabbled in are Japanese and Chinese. This is because Japan and China are the two largest markets in Asia (and the potential to generate revenue in these countries is larger than in South Korea), so many K-pop companies have the talent to study Japanese and Chinese. No BTS members are fluent in Japanese, although overall they can work better in the language than English, as Japanese is closer to the native Korean language. RM is the best Japanese speaking member by v closely monitored. The group has been widely promoted in Japan and BTS can reportedly hold its own in interviews and fan meetings more than they can do in America. With Chinese, BTS has only the most elementary skills and they cant do interviews. However, RM is not the person with the best Chinese skills in the group. Many Chinese, whether they are fluent in English, Japanese, and Chinese or it seems that many people appreciate the fact that bis men seem to be trying to learn how to communicate with fans in other languages.
